The ASU Story:

The ASU story begins as many do - in the basement of a home with a big idea; an idea that could revolutionize the commercial aerospace aftermarket. ASU founder Stephanie Boccarossa spent 13 years building subject matter expertise with aftermarket commercial aircraft components. Jim Boccarossa, ASU CEO, brought 15 years of B2B technology start-up experience to the table, including 2 highly successful exits. Together, they launched ASU in 2014 with the goal of disrupting how commercial landing gear, wheels and brakes are bought & sold in a very active market. By leveraging technology and exceptional service to provide a consistent, integral set of processes, customers will realize immediate value while the industry will gain a revolutionary set of operating standards.

Why ASU?

The Chicago job market remains robust as technology businesses continue to expand. What is it in today's highly competitive market that makes an opportunity compelling and unique? Please consider the following:

- Experts in the industry: ASU's management team has over 20 years of expertise in the close-knit aerospace aftermarket industry, including in-depth tribal knowledge and a trusted advisor to respected industry experts
- Proven Senior Leadership: Jim Boccarossa, CEO, has proven himself a successful B2B entrepreneur and hired seasoned sales and product management leaders who understand the delicate balance between the art and science of managing complex programs with sustainable growth

- Values Driven Brand: The management team at ASU is committed to protecting the positive vibe and thriving company culture. Team members are encouraged to work together using their creativity and curiosity when solving tough challenges
- Industry Growth Ensures Opportunity: In 2018, the global aerospace market is worth $65 Billion with projected growth 30% to $85 billion by 2022. Demand for talent in this industry is on the rise. ASU provides a greenfield opportunity for growth with the stability of an established business and the spirit of a startup.
